De Feldan is said to come from a very wealthy Austrian family, and is con-nected with the nobility. His father, Herr von Proelich Felden, is a banker in Vienna, and held large individual realized interests until the Government took possession of the system. The Baroness Zamon, of Stuttgart, Germany, whose husband is reputed to have an immense income, is the sister of young De Felden.

parently threy years old, and at present lives with her brother-in-law at "the Columbus," formerly the Hotel Feldan.

She alleges that she first met De Feldan at the Belvidere Hotel in January, 1891, when she was employed as overseer of the linen department. De Feldan, she claims, was a dashing young fellow, who seemed to be always well supplied with money. He took her to theatres and other places of amusement and professed the deepest love for her.

Mirs Todtberg says she refused to consent to such an arrangement until after he had told her that he had consulted his legal adviser, who informed him that such a marriage would be legal and thoroughly binding upon both. He save her a wedding ring, she says, and she consented to the arrangement.

They went to live at the Hotel Drants-

In October, the complaint alleges, they returned to the city and took a flat at 213 West Fifty-eighth stret. From there they removed, in January, 1892, to the Cavanata Flats, at Lexington avenue and Eighty-seventh Street.

About a month after the first meeting, according to her affidavit, they became engaged to be married. The date fixed was March 10.

Subsequently they called on John Blum, a brother-in-law of Miss Todiberg's, and various other friends, and in the presence of each De Feidan is alleged to have declared Miss Todtberg to be his afflanced wife.

Shortly before the day agreed upon for the wedding, Miss Todtberg declares that De Feidan told her he feared that if his father heard of his marriage he might, under the peculiar laws of Austria, take mensures to prevent him from coming into the inheritance of an estate valued at about $50,000 when he carrived at the age of twenty-eight years. The income from the estate, amounting to about $5,000, he already enjoyed.

He asked for a postponement of a ceremonial marriage at that time, and sugsested that they announce to their friends that they had been secretly married, and live as man and wife until such time as the contract could be solemnized by a minister.
